ASL Interpreting Services

Deaf conference attendees may require American Sign Language (ASL) interpreters to translate spoken information during keynote presentations, breakout sessions, and social mixers. Some deaf people also enjoy musical performances, ranging from big music festivals to musical theater, and may request ASL interpreting to translate the lyrics, express the singers' emotional qualities, and articulate musical qualities, like the beat and rhythm. Here is a list of ASL providers in Austin and beyond.

Captioning

While ASL Interpreting may accommodate some deaf people who attend your conference or other event, there are many deaf and hard-of-hearing people, especially those who lose their hearing later in life, who do not understand sign language. For these patrons, captioning may be an effective alternative. Closed captions, such as those used on television, computers, and other devices, can be turned on and off by the viewer while open captions are always in view. Communication Access Real-Time Translation (CART) is live open captioning and typically provided at conferences and other events when captioning is requested.

Scooters

Some people with mobility limitations do not travel with mobility devices, or they may only need mobility devices in settings that call for more walking than usual, like a conference or festival. In these cases, a patron may consider renting a mobility device, such as a scooter. These local vendors provide mobility rental options.
